

Dear Readers,

We are pleased to present the inaugural issue of Negotiations: An International Journal of Literary and Cultural Studies. We thank you for embarking on this journey with us. We hope this will be the first in a long series, and our ambition is to set the highest standards for academic ingenuity and respectability. We are profoundly grateful to those who have made this publication possible. First, the distinguished scholars who have consented to be part of the Advisory Editorial team. Additional thanks are owed to the students and faculty of the Department of English, University of North Bengal, for supporting our new initiative, and in particular to those scholars who have contributed articles to our inaugural issue. We are indebted to Professor Saptarshi Ghosh of the Department of Library Science and Dr. Anirban Biswas, Systems Engineer, CIRM of the University of North Bengal without whose generous support the online version of Negotiations would not have begun its journey. The journal looks forward to a long run into the future, publishing scholarship on things related to the humanities and social sciences, past and present.

We hope this issue enriches our readers.
